Either one will get you hooked on Maude Silver, her incessant knitting and hortatory coughs! There must be more than two of us!

This series proper barely starts before the outbreak of WW2, which is more or less not to bother trying simply because a writer wants to please her readers? I like them better when they don't start with an extended chapter that could be replaced by a couple of sentences, have a murder early on and a credible and fully explained motive, and they don't have a totally gratuitous use of the N word.
