This short book is a study of the epic tradition of the early Roman empire and specifically of the epic poems of Ovid, Lucan, Statius, Valerius Flaccus and Silius Italicus. Roman Literature and Its Contexts.

The discussion is organized around three key topics in psychoanalysis - mourning. Some features of WorldCat will not be available. Lateinische Literatur -- Psychoanalyse. A Discourse on the Method. The Invention and Gendering of Epicurus. Drawing especially on Freud's work on dreams and slips, she spotlights textual phenomena that cannot be securely anchored in any intention or psyche but that nevertheless, or for that very reason, seem fraught with meaning; the 'textual unconscious' is her name for the indefinite place from which these phenomena erupt, or which they retroactively constitute, as a kind of 'unconsciousness-effect'. The examples turn our attention away from the father, central both in Freudian theory and Roman ideology, to mothers and sons.
